This year Mr. Jeff Streeter, Director of British Council Japan kindly agreed to give us a speech on English learning in the 21st century and join the friendship party to exchange ideas and opinions on how to study English as a professional English language officer. It is hoped that many of you who have great interests on English learning will attend this event. Please make reservations using the form on the back of this paper or email (fjbs.event@castle.ocn.ne.jp) no later than 16th May, 2014.

Jeff Streeter 氏

Director, British Council Japan (appointed in October, 2011)

Jeff has been with the British Council since 1988 and has worked for the organization in many different capacities and in a wide range of countries in Europe, Latin America and Asia. He was fortunate enough to work in Kyoto for a couple of years in the 1990s. Jeff was born in Devon, in the South West of England and was brought up in the countryside. He studied English language and literature at undergraduate and graduate level at the universities of Oxford and East Anglia and has been an avid reader ever since. Having spent many years in Latin America, he is a fluent Spanish speaker and attempts to translate literature from the region into English in his spare time.
